Sydney Institute of Marine Science (SIMS) is a collaborative research institute bringing together scientists from the universities in the greater Sydney Region and from several NSW Government Departments, the Australian Museum and the Australian Defence Science and Technology Organisation.

It is the principal marine research institute on the South-East Australian coast providing a focal point for:

- world class collaborative marine research;
- provision of marine research for policy makers and managers;
- research training and teaching in the marine sciences;
- national and international collaborations.

The SIMS Foundation has been established to provide long term financial support for SIMS. This includes doctoral and post-doctoral fellowships and support for the research being done at SIMS. Your donation will help us to ensure that SIMS truly will make a difference.

I would like to support the SIMS Foundation by making a donation of:
